*Mawlānā Amīnullah Anṣarī Azīmabādī
and His Qaṣīdah-i Uzmā*

Muhammad Tanzeel al-Siddiqi al-Husaini

ABSTRACT

Mawlānā Amīnullah Anṣarī Azīmabādī was a prolific scholar, teacher, logician, writer and poet of Indian Subcontinent. He was a pupil of Imām Shah Waliullah Muḥaddith Delhvi. His scholarship can be judged from the fact that he was appointed as headmaster in Madarasah 'Āliyah Calcutta. He wrote several books on various topics which were of great benefit for the seekers of knowledge. We find in his remarkable books, a poetic treatise, Qaṣīdah-i Uzmā, regarding the Prophetic Sīrah which gained enviable reputation in his times. It is difficult to determine its first publication, however, according to 'Azīzuddīn Balkhī, it was published few times with a deluxe edition from Anṣarī Press Delhi in 1303 H. The booklet comprises of 96 pages and the poet has tried to encircle the most important sides of the Prophetic life. It is a masterpiece of literature as well as a magnificent specimen from the perspective of research and authenticity. There was abundance of Mawlūd Nāmas in the author's time, containing the fabricated tales and traditions. He has penned a valuable work and this article focuses on its brief overview.
